COURSE OUTLINE

This course will allow students to gain a greater understanding of the phenomenon of wrongful convictions, and their sequela, as they occur in Canada and in the state of Louisiana. Students’ experiences in this field research course will be both pedagogical and practical. Classroom instruction will provide students with an introduction to wrongful convictions as well as provide a greater understanding of how they may occur within both Canadian and American criminal justice systems. Students will be exposed to research on the many contributing factors to wrongful conviction, including eyewitness misidentification, the role of jailhouse informants, false confessions, police/prosecutorial misconduct and faulty forensic science and expert testimony. The course will also focus on wrongful convictions as they occur in the southern United States and on the role of the death penalty. In addition to classroom instructions, students will undertake a field placement in a community organization in New Orleans Parrish that focuses on wrongful convictions, their aftermath and related issues. Combining a field placement with classroom instruction will provide the students with a theoretical and practical understanding of how the criminal justice system can both create and address miscarriages of justice.

COURSE OBJECTIVES
The objectives of this course are to provide students with a well-rounded understanding of how wrongful convictions may occur and how the system attempts to address them. By using both classroom instruction and field placement practice, students will not only be exposed to the research, case law and literature on wrongful convictions, but also to how the community attempts to rectify miscarriages of justice and provide supports for the exonerated upon release. New Orleans is an opportune setting for such a class, as it has a strong innocence project, a history of addressing wrongful convictions and a number of community agencies that support the exonerated upon release. In addition to classroom and field placement experiences, students will also be provided the opportunity to undertake educational excursions while in New Orleans to visit a prison, a courthouse to attend a trial, and an innocence project.

GENERAL

For students to:

1. Gain a better understanding of the problems related to defining what constitutes a miscarriage of justice or a wrongful conviction.

2. Situate miscarriages of justice within both legal and criminological frameworks.

3. Explore the research, literature and case law that illustrate miscarriages of justice in Canada and the state of Louisiana.

SPECIFIC

For students to:

1. Have a basic understanding of the functions of both Canadian and American criminal law.

2. Understand how particular legal and extra-legal factors contribute to wrongful convictions.

3. Understand the role of various actors in the criminal justice system (including police, prosecutors, defense counsel and judges) that play in part in contributing to wrongful convictions, but may also facilitate exonerations.

4. Be exposed to how wrongful convictions are addressed by various community organizations in New Orleans.

PROPOSED COURSE STRUCTURE
The pedagogical aspect of the course will involve meeting three times per week, for three hours each time. Students will be given instruction by myself and one or two guest lecturers on an introduction to basic criminal law in Canada and the United States, on the differing contributing factors to miscarriages of justice, on how wrongful convictions occur in the southern United States and on the role of the death penalty. The field placement aspect of the course will take place in a number of settings where issues of wrongful convictions are addressed, including the Innocence Project New Orleans, Resurrection after Exoneration, and Louisiana Capital Assistance Centre. Students are expected to do a minimum of ten hours per week in their field placement (but are free to do more) for a total of thirty hours. Finally, students will be provided the opportunity to participate in a number of educational excursions, including visits to a courthouse, a prison and an innocence project, where they will be exposed to the actual workings of the criminal justice system.

EVALUATION

Students will be evaluated according to a number of activities.

1. Participation/Discussions – 10%
   Given the seminar format of the class, students will be encouraged to actively participate during class discussion both at the pre-placement seminars in Ottawa and during class time in New Orleans.

2. Brief Presentation – 20%
   During the second week of classes in New Orleans, students will make a brief, individual, 15-minute presentation on an American case (preferably from the state of Louisiana) that illustrates one of the contributing factors to wrongful conviction. The factors include eyewitness misidentification, the use of jailhouse informants, false confessions, police/prosecutorial/judicial misconduct, and faulty forensic science. Students will choose a case that demonstrates how one of these factors contributed to a specific wrongful conviction and present the issue to the class.

3. Field Placement Reflection – 30%
   Students will be required to keep an ongoing journal of their field placement experience while they are in New Orleans. The journal will allow the students to keep track of the evolution of their own learning. Following completion of their placement, students will compose a 1500 word reflection on their placement, based in part on their journal entries, as well as on what they have learned throughout the course.
4. Final Essay – 40%

Students will be expected to research a topic related to the issue of wrongful convictions as they occur in the state of Louisiana. Further detail on this paper will be provided during the course and the paper will be due following completion of the course.

TEXT

Students will be able to purchase a bound copy of the required readings for this course prior to departure.

COURSE SCHEDULE

1. Pre-Departure Training - Ottawa

Students will be required to meet for one day each in February, March and April 2017 to review issues and expectations regarding the field research course. Each session will take approximately two-three hours and cover content related to the course, travel, expectations and living abroad for three weeks. The pre-departure classes will likely be held on the weekend so as to not conflict with class hours during the winter semester. Dates will be arranged in consultation with the students.

2. In the Field – New Orleans, Louisiana

The New Orleans component of the course involves exposing the students to how wrongful convictions occur in this jurisdiction, and how they are addressed by the courts and by state governments. In-class sessions will focus on understanding the many causes of wrongful convictions, including eyewitness misidentification, the use of jailhouse informants, false confessions, police/prosecutorial/judicial misconduct and faulty forensic science. Throughout the three weeks, educational excursions will be arranged to visit a number of facilities, including New Orleans Innocence Project, Louisiana State Penitentiary, and Orleans Parish Criminal District Court. Students will also be expected to undertake a ten-hour per week field placement for a total of thirty hours; field placements will be arranged beforehand and take place in facilities where wrongful convictions, and related issues, are addressed. Participation in field placements will enhance the students’ overall experience and will help them in developing their research papers.

Course Schedule

While on site in New Orleans, the class will meet three times per week for three hours each session, the total class room instruction time over the three weeks will be 27 hours. At the same time, students will be involved in a field placement whereby they will be working ten hours per week (total of 30 hours), for three weeks engaged in activities in the field. In addition, educational excursions will take place each week whereby the class as a whole will visit sites of interest and relevance to the course.

Resources for you

Mentoring Centre - http://www.sciencessociales.uottawa.ca/mentor/fra/
The goal of the Mentoring Centre is to help students with their academic and social well being during their time at the University of Ottawa. Regardless of where a student stands academically, or how far along they are in completing their degree, the mentoring centre is there to help students continue on their path to success.

A student may choose to visit the mentoring centre for very different reasons. Younger students may wish to talk to their older peers to gain insight into programs and services offered by the University, while older student may simply want to brush up on study and time management skills or learn about programs and services for students nearing the end of their degree.

In all, the Mentoring Centre offers a place for students to talk about concerns and problems that they might have in any facet of their lives. While students are able to voice their concerns and problems without fear of judgment, mentors can garner further insight in issues unique to students and find a more practical solution to better improve the services that the Faculty of Social Sciences offers, as well as the services offered by the University of Ottawa.

The Access Service contributes to the creation of an inclusive environment by developing strategies and implementing measures that aim to reduce the barriers to learning for students who have learning disabilities, health, psychiatric or physical conditions.

The Student Resources Centres aim to fulfill all sorts of students needs.
Beware of Academic Fraud!

Academic fraud is an act committed by a student to distort the marking of assignments, tests, examinations, and other forms of academic evaluation. Academic fraud is neither accepted nor tolerated by the University. Anyone found guilty of academic fraud is liable to severe academic sanctions.

Here are a few examples of academic fraud:

- engaging in any form of plagiarism or cheating;
- presenting falsified research data;
- handing in an assignment that was not authored, in whole or in part, by the student;
- submitting the same assignment in more than one course, without the written consent of the professors concerned.

In recent years, the development of the Internet has made it much easier to identify academic plagiarism. The tools available to your professors allow them to trace the exact origin of a text on the Web, using just a few words.

In cases where students are unsure whether they are at fault, it is their responsibility to consult the University’s Web site at the following address: http://www.socialsciences.uottawa.ca/eng/writing_tools.asp « Tools for Writing Papers and Assignments ».

Persons who have committed or attempted to commit (or have been accomplices to) academic fraud will be penalized. Here are some examples of the academic sanctions, which can be imposed:

- a grade of « F » for the assignment or course in question;
- an additional program requirement of between 3 and 30 credits;
- suspension or expulsion from the Faculty.

Last session, most of the students found guilty of fraud were given an « F » for the course and had between three and twelve credits added to their program requirement.
